"That was a great message the President put out on June 17-good day for it," said Mr. Chandler. "It deserved the support of every radical in the country and he ought to have had more than he got. I am a radical, but I trust that in my old age I am learning something. I don't old age I am learning something. I don't believe in defeating progressive legislation because it is not all you want. R. B. LITTLE HITS CAR FLOAT AND STEAM PIPE BURSTS.

Deckhand O'Donnell and Fireman Lavin Were Asteep and Former Was Sealded Trying to Escape-Volunteer Life Savers With Axes Rescue the Other.

The tug B. B. Litt'e, owned by Tice Bros. of 17 Battery place and in charge of Capt. John Gaffney of 35 White street, Jersey City, collided with a New York, New Haven and Hartford car float lashed to tug No. 12 of the railroad yesterday morning opposite Eighty-ninth street in the East River. A great gash was ripped in the side of the R. B. Little, the main steam pipe burst, one man was scalded to death and another was chopped out of the wreckage with a broken ulder and severe scalds.

John O'Donnell of 150 Railroad avenue, Bayonne, N. J., a deckhand, was the man killed, and James Lavin, a fireman, of 59 Grand street, Jersey City, the injured one. The railroad tug was in charge of Capt. R. L. Robbins. At about 10:30 o'clock the R. B. Little with the scow Harry Heffler, loaded with asphalt, in tow was coming up the river with a strong flood tide. Capt. Gaffney was keeping close to the New York shore, when he sighted the railroad tug with its heavy floats coming down stream bucking the tide. They were then close upon each other, and he gave three sharp blasts of the whistle to warn her, at the same time sheering off toward the middle of the river.

The transfer boat was too close in shore and in spite of Capt. Gaffney's utmost efforts at the wheel the tide carried him against one of the car floats. The crash was heard several blocks. The port bulwarks of the tug were carried away, the deckhouse was demolished and the water poured in through a gap in her side, while clouds of steam came from the broken. So foot mark got the Blue Hill Handicap easily. In the first heat of the match Hamburg Belle had the pole and went away a bit in front. Proctor sat back with Uhlan until after the three-quarters was passed, then began to drive. He brought the gelding in about half a length to the good. clouds of steam came from the broken main steam pipe.

The men on deck, who had seen the danger, jumped to the float as it drifted past their stern. Capt. Gaffney stayed at the wheel for a moment longer and headed his boat into the shoal water. Then the steam which was coming in clouds from the broken pipe forced him overboard. That moment that he stayed, however, was enough to save the life of a man, for had the tug sunk in deep water neither Lavin nor O'Donnell could have got out.

As soon as the boats met the crew of the Yorkville division of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Copps, which is stationed at the foot of Eighty-ninth street, put off in their dory. The tug was now aground and heeled far over, enveloped in steam. The survivors called from the car float that every one was safe and they had better keep off as there was danger of an explosion. Albert Smith, the senior lieutenant, heard faint cries coming from the interior of the boat, and putting back for axes his men went at the upper works. It took them twenty-five minutes to get at Lavin. He was badly burned when they got him out, besides having a broken shoulder and several broken ribs. The latter part of the chopping had to be done carefully for fear of striking the helpless man. Fifteen minutes later, working in stifling steam, they found the body of O'Donnell. An ambulance call had been sent in and Dr. Hughes took the injured man to Flower Hospital. The body of O'Donnell was taken to the Harlem morgue. The R. B. Little's tow rope had parted and the scow loaded with asphalt was almost upon the Hogsback reef before the fireboat George B. McClellan succeeded in getting a line on board. Launch A with Lieut. Dwyer in charge came down with the reserves from harbor squad B. A tug towed the disabled R. B. Little to the pier at the foot of Ninety-second street.

National League sectional strife in New York closed for the season yesterday, the Giants capstzing the Cardinals. While the conflict wasn't so thrilling or fast as to drive anybody hysterical with delight it was the best played of the three. The fielding was more like the orthodox standard, though the Giants had a rickety first inning. This game was no exception from the two others in producing an athlete who scolded over a decision until sent to the clubhouse. It was McGraw this time. He got his congé in the first inning. Other growing Giants on the bench were silenced only when Emslie threatened to "chase" the whole crowd.

A foul tip shot back in the eighth inning and landed on Emslie's head with stunning force. The umpire had his head bent downward at the time and the mask was no protection. The ball struck him on top of the head. He staggered and reeled and would have fallen if a couple of players hadn't caught and supported him. It took several minutes for him to revive, but he was game and stuck it out to the finish. Emslie has had more hard bumps behind the bat than all the rest of the umpires put together.

The Cardinals did not start the game as if on mischief bent, Barbeau striking out. Ellis, however, was in more positive mood and outfooted a grounder to Bridwell. Phelps's sacrifice was in reality a force, but Ames made a bad throw to Doyle. Ellis dirifted to third and was slugged home by Konetchy, whose single was fumbled by Seymour. Evans singled and scored Phelps, whereat Ames took himself in hand and stopped the Cardinals' festivities.

McGraw's kick came on a play on Seymour in the first inning. Doyle and Seymour on the line, then peaged to Konetchy for a double play. The dispute was over whether he did or did not touch Seymour.

The Giants strung out five able bodied singles in the third inning, starting with to Barbeau, who made a swing at Seymour on the line, then peaged to Konetchy for a couble play. The dispute was over whether he did or did not touch Seymour.

The Cubs deluged the field with base hits in the ninth inning at Washington Park yesterday and made eight runs. That enabled them to grab the laurels away yesterony and made eight runs. That enabled them to grab the laurels away from the Brooklyns, who had four runs. President Ebbets, however, will protest the game. It seems there was an agreement to call the game at 5:15 o'clock, and it is contended that had this been done the game would have reverted back to the end of the eighth and made the Brooklyns the winners. Protests are flying thick and fast in the National League this season.

The deluge in the ninth began with one out. Hofman singled and Tinker walked. Howard, pinch hitter, earned his pay by being hit. Zimmerman, pinch hitter No. 2, singled. Stanley promenaded. Evers was hit and Schulte pasted the buib for a single. Mr. Chance, he tripled, Steinfeldt made a sacrifice fly and Bre'r Hofman pillaged the tottering McIntire for a hit. The direful net result was eight runs.

Neatly manipulated stick work in which Burch, Clement, Lennox, Jordan and Hummel figured furnished four runs for the locals. Catcher Archer was knocked out by a foul tip in the fifth inning. He was unable to centinue playing, but walked off the field to the clubhouse. The score:

AMERICAN LEAGUE. Detroits and Clevelands Play Tie Game

The Detroits fell back a little yesterday but not enough to worry them much. They played a tie game with the Clevelands, while the Athleties were knocking the spots out of the tailenders. The White Sox helped the Highlanders hold sixth place by trimming the Browns again. The results: Detroit. 1; Cleveland, 1.

Chicago, 4: St. Louis, &. STANDING OF THE CLUBS.

especially the latter, who smashed out a his wines scored Mortarty from third. Two pretty double plays helped the Tigers. In the sinth, after Parring had singled, Stanage made a wonderful catch of Ball's short pop, and while lying on the ground doubled Perring off first. The score:

In the semi-final for the O'Connell consolation cup this morning Marshall meets Pepper and Morrison plays Maurer. There was no wind, and the scoring all down the line was better than in Thursday's blow. As a public thoroughfare for everyone bent on golfing who can buy or borrow a club the Van Cortlandt course is in fair condition when the heavy play is considered. More has been spent in money and labor on it within the year than ever before. Some New York Golf Club members assert that the work has not been done with judgment, and they are to petition Mayor McClellan to give to them a better links. The summaries:
